ABSTRACT

A method for computer aided design of semiconductor chips which minimizes sensitivity to latchup is provided. The method evaluates electron transmission, reflection and absorption at geometric shapes that represent components of the semiconductor.